Administrative/Biographical History

Biographical note on High Plains Library District

Greeley Public Library was originally administered by the City of Greeley. During the time period covered in this collection the library was also known as Lincoln Park Branch Library and Lincoln Park Library and was located downtown, adjacent to and just north of Lincoln Park. In 1986, the Greeley Public Library was absorbed into the mill levy-funded entity known as Weld Library District. The District covers all of Weld County except Dacono and Clearview Library District's service area, and also annexes part of Boulder County. In 2008, the Weld Library District was renamed to High Plains Library District.

Scope and Content

Collection of photographs, negatives, correspondence and printed material produced by the High Plains Library District and Friends of the Lincoln Park Library. Photos are of staff, meetings, children's and adults' activities at the Lincoln Park Branch Library (now High Plains Library District). The collection also includes correspondence between the Friends of the Lincoln Park Library, flyers and pamphlets collected by the Friends of the Lincoln Park Library. The materials pertain geographically to Greeley, Colorado.
