Administrative/Biographical History

Brief History of the Hunter Opera House (Greeley Opera House)

The Hunter Opera House, also called the Greeley Opera House, in Greeley, CO was opened in 1886. It was located on the second floor of the building at 8th and 8th. It was built to serve as a venue for theatrical and musical productions for the area between Cheyenne and Denver.

Instrumental in bringing the theater to Greeley was S. D. Hunter, a local cattleman. He was a Partner in the Hunter and West Bank, which occupied the first floor of the building.

The theater cost $85,000 and was the largest and finest in the state north of Denver. It seated 800 people and the stage was built by the carpenters from the Tabor Opera House in Denver.

The theater featured traveling theater and companies and musicians, as well as local talent.

The programs included admonitions to the audience such as:

- Do not applaud with your feet.
- Do not spit tobacco on the floor.

- Do not eat peanuts in the hall.
- Do not whistle or shout in applauding.
- Do not stand on the chairs.
- Do not rush for the doors before the curtain drops.

When the Sterling Theater was built in Greeley in 1911, theatricals were taken to that venue and the 8th and 8th Building became mainly businesses.
