Administrative/Biographical History

Greeley Tribune

This collection comes from the Greeley Tribune or the Tribune-Republican Publishing Company. The Greeley Tribune was founded in 1870 by Nathan C. Meeker who is also the founder of Greeley, Colorado, known as Union Colony at the time of its establishment. Mr. Meeker owned and published the Greeley Tribune Newspaper from 1870 until 1875 when he had to sell half of the company in order to pay off debt that he had accumulated while living in Greeley. The Greeley Tribune printed a weekly paper from 1870 to 1908. It became a daily paper in 1913, when the Greeley Tribune purchased two other daily papers in Greeley, Colorado. The Greeley Tribune covers the whole Weld County area, which is the ninth largest agriculture-producing county in the United State. The owners of the Greeley Tribune include: 1870: First publisher, Nathan Meeker; 1875: Meeker and E. J. Carver; 1879: Ralph Meeker and Carver; 1885: Carver sole publisher; 1908: C. H. Wolfe; 1913-1953: Charles Hansen; 1953-1977: Mildred Hansen; 1977- present: Swift Newspapers.

Nathan Cook Meeker

Nathan C. Meeker was born on July 12, 1817 in Euclid, Ohio and died on September 29, 1879 in Meeker, Colorado. He was known as a 19th-century United States journalist, homesteader, entrepreneur, and Indian Agent for the federal government. He is remembered for founding Union Colony and the Greeley Tribune newspaper in 1870.

Charles Edward Hansen

Charles Hansen moved to Greeley, Colorado in 1902 as a young newspaperman. He was hired at the Greeley Tribune as a part-time reporter/editor. He purchased the weekly Weld County Republican Newspaper which became the Greeley Republican. In 1913 the Greeley Daily Tribune and the Greeley Republican merged together, and for the next 40 years Mr. Hansen served as the publisher of both papers. During this time, he served as the president of the Greeley Tribune Republican Publishing Co., the Greeley Chamber of Commerce, and the Northern Colorado Water Conservancy Districts. Charles Hansen, also helped establish the Greeley Philharmonic Orchestra. He is also remembered because he helped to bring water to the plains of Colorado through the Colorado-Big Thompson Water Diversion Project.
